Evaluation: Some items' distractor must be checked. Avoid providing 'intentionally wrong form' or ungrammatical phrases for the wrong answers.

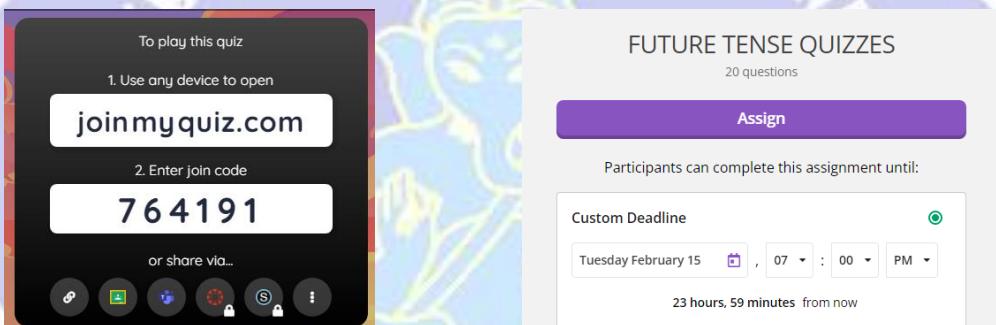

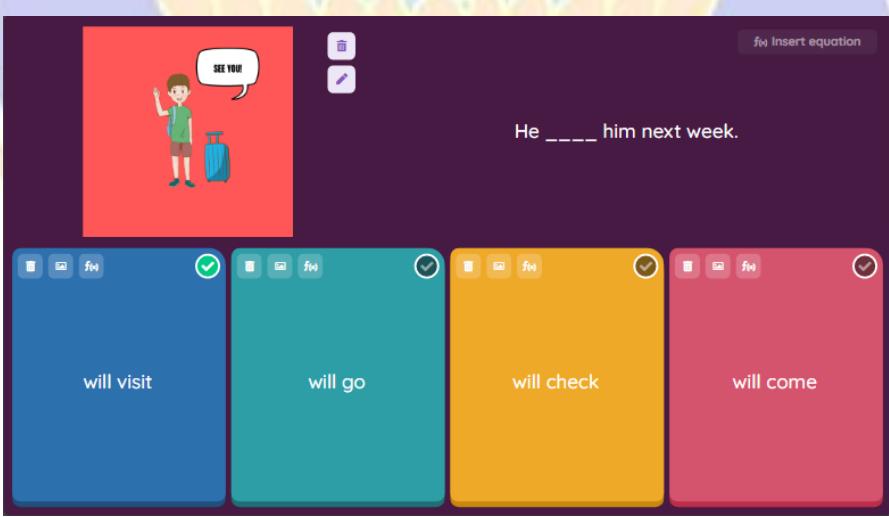

After refinement: The researcher changed some items to avoid using ungrammatical answers as distracting answers.

Appendix 6. Digital Supplementary Materials' Designed by using Quizizz

Digital Supplementary Future Tense Material by using Quizizz

In Quizizz, there are two 20 question topics: 10 questions about telling future events and 10 questions about predicting future events. Topics were chosen based on the IEC syllabus for English language teaching in the first semester. The quiz was created using the IEC syllabus as a model. The researcher employed three different sorts of quizzes: multiple-choice, open-ended, and fill-in-the-blank questions.

Digital Supplementary Future Tense Material by using Quizizz
Quizizz can be accessed anywhere and anytime. Students can access it through www.quizizz.com using any device (laptop, PC, smartphone) as long as it is connected to the internet. Students can join through the code given by the teacher when doing a live game session. Beside that, the teacher can also give a quiz as a task to be done with a predetermined time limit.
Telling Future Events
 The screenshot shows a fill-in-the-blank exercise. On the left, there is an illustration of a boy standing next to a blue suitcase with a speech bubble saying "SEE YOU". To the right of the illustration is the sentence "He _____ him next week." Below the sentence are four options: "will visit" (blue card), "will go" (teal card), "will check" (yellow card), and "will come" (pink card). Each option has a green checkmark icon in its top right corner.
