ABSTRACT

This research reveals the accounting practices applied, especially in family-owned businesses, by looking at and describing the current accounting practices, dynamics and standards. The case study method with a descriptive qualitative approach was used in the research. The data collected is primary data. This research was conducted at the Bali International Job Training Institute in Singaraja City, Buleleng Regency. Some of the studies used in this research include understanding accounting, family-owned companies and the socioemotional wealth approach. The research results show that LPK Bali International's family-owned business accounting practices reflect a socioemotional wealth approach. This can be seen from the ownership structure, family involvement in important positions, and full control over transactions that take place within the company. The accounting practice of this family-owned business continues to develop between generations, which shows that there are several benefits to the cash management process, budget preparation process and financial reporting process. The research results also show that the family-owned business LPK Bali International does not use applicable general accounting standards. This is supported by several factors in using financial reports according to needs, as well as requiring human resources that are appropriate to the family's character and culture. Simple accounting practices characterized by manual recording, focusing on cash, documentation and archiving of transactions, as well as components of preparing financial reports which are starting to be prepared using software. Based on these results, it is recommended that the development of family-owned business accounting practices continue to develop from the use of software and the application of accounting standards according to the type of company.
