ABSTRACT

This study aims to analyze the application of the Government Agency Performance Accountability System (SAKIP) in realizing good government governance in the Buleleng Regency DPRD Secretariat. In this study, a descriptive quantitative method was used with data collection instruments in the form of interviews, observations, and documentation studies. The results of the research obtained are that the implementation of the Government Agency Performance Accountability System (SAKIP) has been running well by following up on the results of the previous year's recommendations and has supporting infrastructure. Although, the competence of human resources is still incompetent and there is overlap in regulations.
