ABSTRACT

This study aims to examine the influence of lifestyle and online customer reviews on the purchase intention of The Originote brand facial moisturizer in Singaraja, both simultaneously and partially. This study uses a causal quantitative approach. The subjects of the study were women in Singaraja City who were at least 17 years old and had an interest and ability to purchase The Originote products. The objects of the study were lifestyle, online customer reviews, and purchase intention. The sampling method used purposive sampling technique, with a sample size of 120 respondents. The instrument used to collect data was a questionnaire with a Likert scale. The data analysis technique used multiple linear regression with the SPSS version 25 application. Before the analysis, classical assumption tests were carried out such as normality, multicollinearity, and heteroscedasticity tests. The results of the study showed that (1) lifestyle had a positive and significant effect on purchase intention, (2) online customer reviews also had a positive and significant effect on purchase intention, and (3) simultaneously, both variables had a positive and significant effect on purchase intention of The Originote brand facial moisturizer in Singaraja. Business actors are advised to understand consumer lifestyles and improve the quality of customer reviews in order to encourage purchase intention.
