Abstract

This study aims to determine teachers' perceptions of assessment in differentiated instruction at SMA Negeri 3 Singaraja. This research focuses on how teachers conduct assessment in differentiated instruction, how teachers' perceptions related to the assessment process in differentiated instruction and the challenges faced by teachers. This research uses a qualitative case study design with data collection techniques using document analysis, observation, surveys, and interviews. The results showed that teachers in differentiated instruction apply diagnostic, formative and summative assessment. Teachers also implement differentiated instruction in the classroom by differentiating the process, content and product. However, in some aspects teachers still use traditional assessment in learning process. In general, teachers have a positive perception of assessment in differentiated instruction. In its implementation, teachers also experience challenges in the form of, lack of time, lack of tools and media, and student test results that do not always reflect the condition of students in the classroom.
